

SOLDIER PROVES MESSAGE UNTRUE

Edward Beavers, Soldier, Twice Reported Dead, Returns to Home in Fort Ritner.

SON OF GEORGE BEAVERS

Inducted Into Service in Lawrence County in March 1918—Contingent Suffers Reverses.

Although he had been twice reported dead, Edward Beavers, aged twenty-one, a soldier in the World War, has returned to his home in Fort Ritner very much alive. The return of Beavers following receipt of messages, which had every indication of being authentic, that he had died of wounds received in action is one of the strangest incidents that has developed in this vicinity in connection with the war. The returned soldier is the son of George Beavers, well known in the Fort Ritner neighborhood.

Beavers was inducted into military service in March 1918, with a contingent of Lawrence county men. The group which departed at the same time saw much active fighting and all of the men were at least slightly wounded. One of the number, Delbert Stephenson, now superintendent of the Upland public schools, was the only one to be taken prisoner. He spent eighteen months in various prison camps in Germany.

Beavers was slightly gassed in one battle but his condition was not serious. His father late in 1918 received a message that his son had died of wounds received in action. Later another message bringing the same sad news was received. Meanwhile Beavers was unable to communicate with his relatives and had no way to refute the messages.

The sorrow in the Beavers family, however, was recently turned to joy by receipt of a letter from the son stating that he was well and happy and would soon return home. His arrival at Fort Ritner soon followed the letter.

MISS LULA EDWARDS HURT IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Buggy Turned Over When Horse Takes Fright and Runs—Elbow is Dislocated.

Miss Lula Edwards, of Vallonia, was painfully injured this morning in a runaway accident which occurred near the home of Frank Shelton, on the Brownstown-Vallonia road. The horse became frightened and ran away, and the buggy was turned over.

Mrs. Edwards and two daughters were in the buggy, but Miss Lula Edwards was the only one to sustain injuries. Her elbow was dislocated and she sustained painful bruises and cuts about the body. She was taken to the office of Dr. P. A. Zaring in Brownstown, where her injuries were dressed. Later she was taken home and is resting as well as could be expected.

GIRL LURED FROM HOUSE BY PROMISE OF MARRIAGE

Italian Under Arrest in Indianapolis Charged With "White Slavery."

Indianapolis, Sept. 20—Lured from her home by a promise of marriage and detained by threats of being murdered by an "insanely jealous" lover, is the story told by pretty Lenora Gastineau, 17, found hiding in a closet in a down town hotel early today.

James Garolano, 27, an Italian, fashionably dressed, and a man of fine appearance is under arrest on the charges of white slavery, and contributing to the delinquency. The girl told the police she was of French descent but that she had always lived in the United States.

Miss Gastineau, is held at the detention home and is charged with being a delinquent girl. Her mother lives at 611 East Main street, Chillicothe, O. Garolano said the girl's father is an officer in the United States army and is stationed at Camp Sherman, near Chillicothe.

SOME TEXT BOOKS HAVE NOT ARRIVED

Pupils in Classes of Geography and Geometry Have Not Been Supplied With Books.

COPY BOOKS WERE DELAYED

Local Interest Shown in Proposed Investigation of School Book Shortage in Indiana.

In view of the shortage of some school books in this city, considerable interest is manifested here in the proposed investigation of conditions in Indiana which prevent pupils of the public schools from being adequately provided with the necessary texts. Elie Stansbury, attorney general, has given a ruling that the state board of education is empowered under the law to cancel the contracts with the publishers of the books. Such concerns are required to provide bond to supply these texts and the attorney-general holds that their failure to do so may result in a forfeiture of the bond.

Local dealers placed their orders for school books early in August, just as soon as the city and county school authorities decided what texts would be needed and the approximate number required. The law provides that these orders must be filled within five days after they are received. Some of the text books were delivered promptly while others have not yet arrived. The interference with the study of courses where the pupils do not have books is apparent.

Geography texts for the grades and the books for the study of geometry in the high school have not arrived. The copy books for the grades were delivered here a few days ago after a long delay. A few other texts were delayed but arrived after the school year opened. The existing shortage is said to be the most serious that has ever existed in Indiana. Complaints continue to reach the state board of education and the state superintendent from all sections of the state. The shortage, it is said, is due in part to the fact that the firm that was given the contract for the books entered into another contract with a firm at Hammond to publish them. The Hammond firm has been unable to issue the texts rapidly enough to meet the demand.

"An examination of the contract and bond submitted to me," says the attorney general, "discloses that the publisher has agreed to fill all orders received from designated dealers or school corporations within five days of the receipt thereof and that upon his failure to comply with any of the requirements of his contract that he will thereby forfeit his bond of $40,000, conditioned that he will comply with his contract and as it will be impossible to determine the actual damages which will arise to the state of Indiana by reason of the breach of said contract the sum of forty thousand ($40,000) dollars is agreed upon and taken as liquidated damages and payable to the state of Indiana."

"The law of Indiana enters into and forms a part of this contract and I find it is provided by Sec. 5 of the act of March 8, 1917 (Acts 1917, p. 539), that the county superintendent of schools in each county of this state is required to appoint two or more dealers or agents within each county who have charge of the sale and distribution of school books contracted for by the board of school book commissioners. These dealers are required to carry a sufficient supply of adopted books for the patrons of the schools of the county. Such dealers are required to satisfy the publishers of adopted books that they are able to pay for such books and will pay therefor in cash within sixty days of shipments made. The section further provides that: 'It shall be the duty of said dealer or agents annually in July to ascertain from the county superintendent the probable number of books that will be needed to supply the schools for the ensuing year, and upon receipt of this information he shall order said books on or before the first day of August in each year.'"

AMERICAN LEGION TO BE ORGANIZED

Move on Foot to Get a Charter For Seymour and Jackson County World War Veterans.

CHARTER IS APPLIED FOR

Every Soldier, Sailor and Marine Will Be Asked to Join Organization—First in County.

A move is on foot to establish a chapter of the American Legion in Seymour and already application has been made for a charter. In order to get a charter it was necessary that fifteen World War veterans sign the application papers which has been done and it is expected that a charter will be perfected here in the very near future.

A large number of cities and towns throughout the state have organized chapters of the American Legion and it is the intention of the persons at the head of the organization in the state to have every county organized within the next few months. Every soldier, sailor and marine will be invited to join the organization which will be wholly for their benefit. As soon as a charter is received for the Seymour chapter and an organization has been perfected, a campaign will be made for membership.

So far Seymour is the first place in the county where a move has been started to establish an order of the American Legion and so long as no other organizations are perfected a campaign for membership will be made throughout the county. It is pointed out that ex-service men can join the Seymour chapter and later have their membership transferred providing other chapters are organized in the county to which they would prefer to belong.

The purpose of the American Legion is wholly to look after the welfare of the World War Veterans. It is wholly a social organization and one of its purposes is to have an annual reunion of the ex-service men. Matters of interest to World War Veterans that might come up in the future will be looked after through the organization.

T. H. Montgomery, a local attorney, who was recently discharged as a First Lieutenant in the U. S. army after several months active service in France, has been instrumental in getting a chapter of the American Legion for Seymour for the World War veterans in this city and Jackson county. Mr. Montgomery is being supported in the move by several ex-service men and it is assured that a chapter will be installed here in the near future.

PRESIDENT TO SPEND SUNDAY IN LOS ANGELES

Wilson and Party Pleased With Reception Accorded Him in San Diego.

(By Hugh Baillie, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Aboard President's Train, Sept. 20—President Wilson today went to Los Angeles to make possibly two speeches and take a week-end rest. Only one speech was scheduled at the Shrine auditorium in the evening but it was considered likely that he also would speak at a dinner to be tendered him.

The president's train pulled out of San Diego at 11 o'clock last night. A small crowd was on hand, all that could get through the police lines to see him off. They cheered as the train departed.

He planned to arrive in Los Angeles at 9 o'clock this morning and spend the day as quietly as possible. Sunday was set apart as a day of rest. Sunday night the president will leave for Reno on his eastward swing.

The presidential party was very much pleased with the reception at San Diego. Wilson addressed a crowd estimated at more than 40,000 in the San Diego stadium.

Wilson was much interested in the device which carried his voice to most of the great throng. It was the biggest crowd Wilson had met on the trip so far.

CLOSER INSPECTION OF OIL WILL BE MADE

State Pure Food and Drug Department Will Take Over Work October 1.

By United Press

Indianapolis, September 20—Basing its action on the assertion that there will be more real inspection of oil in Indiana in the future than there has been in the past, the state pure food and drug department was to hold an examination today to choose its corps of oil inspectors upon their qualifications.

On the last day of this month, the present system of oil inspection passes out of existence and the inspection will be placed under supervision of the food and drug department October 1 in accordance with a law passed by the 1919 legislature.

The inspectors will be placed on a straight salary basis with an expense account. The system now in effect provides compensation for the inspectors by giving them the fees paid by the oil companies for each inspection. Under the new law, the state will take over these fees and turn them into the state treasury.

STAGE IS SET FOR INDUSTRIAL DRAMA

Preparations Made by Employes and Employers for Great Steel Strike Monday.

OUTCOME IS UNCERTAIN

Union Heads Reiterate Confidence That Industry Will Be Completely Paralyzed.

By United Press

The stage was set today for what may prove one of the greatest industrial dramas in American history.

Every preparation has been made both by employes and employers for the nationwide steel strike Monday. Union leaders reiterated their confidence of closing down every plant in the country owned by or affiliated with the United States Steel Corporation. Officials of the corporations were equally confident that the great majority of their workmen would remain loyal and enable the plant to continue operation.

State and city authorities have begun to take precaution to prevent possible disorder. In the Pittsburgh district two companies of state troops were ordered out to patrol steel towns in that vicinity. Reports were circulated that the steel corporation was organizing 10,000 deputies to guard its plants. From practically every steel center charges were repeated by union men that the company had armed its plants with rifles and machine guns, but in no incident could this be confirmed.

John Fitzpatrick, chief organizer of the steel workers, announced today that women would be engaged by the strikers to visit their homes, look after the wants of their families and keep up their morale. Judge Gary of the Steel Corporation, was not at his office in New York today and his clerks said there had been no deviation from his attitude of no compromise.

W. Rueben, general counsel for the steel workers, said in New York today, "organized capital must meet organized labor or organized riot."

Officials of the Allegheny Steel Company at Brackenridge, Pa., said their employes had voted overwhelmingly against a strike.

JEWISH NEW YEAR ON WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24

Local Jews Will Observe Holiday in Other Cities—Prayer is Salient Feature of Service.

Rosh Hashana, one of the most beautiful and solemn of Hebrew holidays will be celebrated by local Jews beginning next Wednesday evening and by the reform congregation through Thursday and by the Orthodox congregations until Friday evening.

According to the Jewish calendar it is New Year of the year 5680 corresponding to Wednesday, September 24, 1919. It ushers in the ten days of penitence. Rosh Hashana is a day of sublime festivals. Prayer constitutes the salient feature of the service, whether it be in a reformed or orthodox congregation.

Several local Jews will attend the special services in other cities.

STRIKERS CALL MASS MEETING

Leaders of Steel Workers' Organizations Arranging for Gatherings Sunday.

STRIKE SCHEDULED MONDAY

Night Shifts to Go to Work as Usual Sunday But May Quit at Dawn Monday.

By United Press

Pittsburg, September 20—Mass meetings will be held in the villages and towns throughout the great steel districts Sunday at which organizers and union leaders will address the workers on the eve of the scheduled big steel strike. Steel companies were reported to have rented all the halls in Braddock and Homestead in the hope of preventing meetings of steel workers after they strike. Telegrams and telephone calls went out from national and various district headquarters today arranging for speakers for the meetings. The steel workers and members of the twenty-four affiliated unions will be urged to strike to the man. Night shifts employes are scheduled to go to their work as usual Sunday night but with the dawn Monday the leaders expect to tie up or cripple all big mills.

Chicago, September 20—Preparations for a gigantic industrial battle were made there today with the strike of steel workers practically settled. Unions denied any intention of force. Steel companies over the entire Chicago industrial district regardless of the denial fortified themselves for a siege. Food in huge quantities were taken behind the wooden barricades which surround most of the plants. Company officials asserted only a minority of their employes would strike. They expect to keep loyal workers inside the plant for so long a time as necessary. It was denied that arrangements had been made for armed guards and detectives to guard the works, but union officials said there was evidence the employes are thus preparing.

In the Chicago district there are over 30,000 steel workers. In addition there are hundreds of concerns dependent upon the output of steel for operation. If the strike should extend over a long period the production of agricultural tools, automobiles, factory machinery, wire fences and numerous other articles will be hampered.

One plant, the Illinois Steel company at South Chicago, manufacturers of steel rails exclusively. It was said there the stock of completed rails is sufficient to meet any demand arising for several months.

Reports that some allied unions recommend their men remain at work pending the industrial conference at Washington next month, were denied by union heads. They said all the workers were united in the determination to force consideration of their wage and working condition demands.

WANTS AMENDMENT TO LEVER ACT ENACTED AT ONCE

Department of Justice Ready to Take Action Against Profiteer in Necessaries.

By United Press

Washington, September 20—Judge Ames, assistant attorney general, today wrote to Chairman Haugen of the house agricultural committee, urging immediate passage of the amendment to the Lever food control bill providing jail sentences for profiteers. Acting for Attorney General Palmer Ames took this action following the announcement of the labor department that food prices in August reached the highest level yet known.

"Reports continue coming to this department," said Ames, "indicating profiteering in shoes and other wearing apparel. Pending passage of the amendment the department is powerless to deal effectively with these reports."

The necessity of calling off the Indiana dairy convention which was to have been held here the last of this month because a suitable building could not be found for the exhibits, again reveals the necessity of this city having a pavilion which would answer such purposes. Many conventions of this character could be brought here without cost to the citizens if a proper hall and sufficient exhibit space were available. This might be considered in connection with the movement to organize a Jackson county fair association which would establish permanent buildings.

KNOWN AS WITCHCRAFT TOWN

Old Salem, Mass., Has Never Been Able to Live Down the Much-Disliked Name.

Salem is nationally known as the witchcraft town of history, a title which it has been trying to live down for 200 years. Fortunately for Salem, the terror of witchcraft is fading from memory.

Invariably the visitor comes to Salem with the idea of witches firmly fixed in his mind, but the only evidence of their existence that he can find is a tiepin bearing a tiny witch astride a broomstick. Besides buying witch-adorned souvenirs, which Salem provides to meet the demands of visitors, there are other ways of satisfying witch-hunting ambitions.

To a person already keyed to a high pitch by vague recollections of witch days Salem on a frosty moonlight night seems to slip back a century or so into the solemn superstitious little Puritan town, where one must think several times before making the most casual remark lest it be construed as evidence of friendly dealings with the devil.

Over by the cemetery the tombstones of the witch accusers gleam ghostly in the moonlight. It seems plausible that any of those venerable judges of 1692 might glide suddenly into view and stroll with dignity down the street or that Mistress Sarah Good or Elizabeth How should appear and ask sternly if it was your ancestor that labeled her a witch.

Out on Gallows hill, too, there is "atmosphere" undiluted. Here 19 unfortunate convicted of witchcraft met their fate before Puritan common sense overcame Puritan fanaticism. Gallows hill is a monument to Salem's darkest days.

EASY TO SEE ONE'S BRAIN

Scientist Asserts That All That is Necessary is a Candle and Some Perseverance.

"Have you ever seen your brain?" is not such an outlandish question as one might suppose. In fact, it is quite possible to see one's own brain, according to Dr. Fraser Halle, says London Tit-Bits.

Many years ago Purkinje startled the scientific world by announcing that by passing a candle to and fro several times by the side of the eye, this might be done. The air in front, he declared, was transformed into a kind of screen on which was reflected what he supposed to be a magnified image of part of the retina.

This started a research movement among the scientists of the period, and a controversy began.

Sir C. Wheatstone thought the professor was slightly out of his bearings. He declared that what the latter had seen was merely the shadow of the vascular network.

Then Dr. Fraser Halle returned to the attack, and stated that he had succeeded in identifying the picture with the representation of the "anterior lobe of the cerebrum."

The candle should be moved to and fro about four inches below the eye and three and a quarter inches from the face. If the movement is suspended, the image disappears. Night is the best time for this experiment, but it can be seen faintly, in any dark place even in the daytime.

Exterminating Pests.

Uncle Sam employs approximately 300 professional trappers and hunters to assist western stockmen in exterminating wild predatory animals from the range country. These hunters have killed 70,713 predatory animals in the last three years, which has resulted in a direct saving estimated at nearly 5½ million dollars a year to the stockmen of the Rocky Mountain section. The total kill consisted of 60,473 coyotes, 8,094 bobcats, 1,822 wolves, 201 mountain lions and 137 bears. The pelts of the animals killed were sold for approximately $100,000, which, of course, is of considerable aid to the government in financing the work. In addition to animals killed by trapping and shooting, great numbers of coyotes have been killed by the carefully organized poisoning campaigns conducted by the biological survey.

URGE SENATE TO HASTEN PEACE

Leaders in Forty States, Regardless of Party, Sign Ringing Appeal.

TREATY WITHOUT AMENDMENT

Say Every Day of Delay Puts World in Imminent Peril of New War. Point to National Unrest.

New York.—(Special).—Two hundred and fifty leading Americans, Republicans and Democrats representing forty different states and every prominent activity have joined in a non-partisan effort to bring about the ratification of the Peace Treaty "without amendment and without delay." Their names are attached to an address to the United States senate, which was made public today, through the League to Enforce Peace, after it had been sent to every member of the senate.

The signers, almost without exception, are men and women of national reputation. They include such prominent citizens as ex-President Taft, George W. Wickersham, Attorney-General in the last Republican administration; A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard; Charles C. Moore of San Francisco, president of the Panama Exposition; Judge George Gray of Wilmington, Del.; President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the Philadelphia publisher; President Heber J. Grant of the Mormon Church, and Spargo, leader of the Socialists who supported the war.

The signers declare that every day of delay in ratifying the treaty puts the world in "imminent peril of new war."

Their statement follows:

In the senate at Washington, now that the committee on foreign relations has reported the treaty, the lines are sharply drawn between the immediate ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, and its amendment with a reassembling of the conference and a reopening of negotiations that would bring great delay and prolonged uncertainty in settling the great issues of the peace. No partisan plea can be made. Party lines are already broken.

Standing at a distance from the conflict in the senate chamber, we plead for immediate ratification without delay. Our land requires it. A state of nervous strain, tension and unrest exists manifesting itself in disturbances, which in some cases have no self evident connection with the war, but which are, in fact, its aftermath. The world is put in imminent peril of new wars by the lapse of each day. Dissensions between us and our former allies are being sown. We firmly believe and solemnly declare that the state and cities in which we dwell desire immediate peace.

The waging of war steadied and united the American people. Peace will bring prosperity, and prosperity content. Delay in the senate postponing ratification in this uncertain period of neither peace nor war has resulted in indecision and doubt, bred strife and quickened the cupidity of those who sell the daily necessities of life and the fears of those whose daily wage no longer fills the daily market basket.

We beseech the senate to give the land peace and certainty by a ratification which will not keep us longer in the shadows of possible wars, but give the whole world the light of peace. Reservations in the nature of clarifications in the meaning of the treaty, not inconsistent with its terms, will not require the reopening of the negotiations with Germany and with our associates in the war, which we all and each united to win.

But there is no possibility of doubt that amendment of the treaty, as is now proposed in the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, would require negotiation and a reopening of all the questions decided at Paris. Months of delay would follow. The perils of the present would become the deadly dangers of the near future. All the doubt engendered would aid the plots for violent revolution in this and other lands. The issues here and elsewhere between capital and labor, the conspiracy of speculation and profiteer, would all grow and become more perilous.

This cannot be. The American people cannot, after a victorious war, permit its government to petition Germany, which has accepted the treaty, for its consent to changes in the treaty. Yet if the United States should amend the treaty for its own purpose and policy, Germany would have full right to ask for concessions. Germany has agreed to make no claim in regard to enemy property seized in this country to an amount of several hundred million dollars. Our recent foe could ask for a reopening of this issue and of the Lusitania claims. I could raise every question open before hostilities in regard to submarine warfare and the treatment of its nationals in this country. All the provisions for our trade in German raised by the economic clauses of the treaty, many of them vital to our industries and our farms, as in dye patents, dye supplies and fertilizers, the working of the Reparation Commission, which superintends the trade of all with Germany, could all be brought up by Berlin for readjustment by our negotiators, acting for the United States alone and no longer associated with other victorious powers or supported by a victorious American army on the German border.

Peace itself, the peace of the world, is delayed until ratification comes. And any amendment postpones peace. Germany and England alone of the principal powers have ratified. The other principals necessarily await our action, influential and powerful as we are today in the world's affairs. The ravages of war on more than a score of fighting fronts are continued by any needless delay. Let the senate give the world peace by ratification without amendment.

Even the amendment for which most can be said, the provision in regard to Shantung, will secure nothing which cannot be gained if China, backed by the powerful advocacy of the United States, addresses itself to the machinery for righting international wrongs and meeting just claims created by the league between nations. China, after eighty years of oppressive treaties and despoiled rights, by which all the great powers have profited directly or indirectly, has for the first time, in this covenant and treaty, the means and method to secure justice and the removal of the oppressive economic interference of stronger nations whose citizens are within her gates, protected by a long succession of international agreements. Moreover, it should be remembered that the clause regarding Shantung was made upon the statement by Japan that she will return the territory to China, and therefore, upon that condition, compliance with which promise the league can require.

The peace of the present and the righteousness of the future can be best secured by the ratification of the covenant and treaty without amendment. Let the senate take no action that will give any party to the treaty, and especially Germany, ground for maintaining that the ratification of the United States is not complete and that changes requiring a resumption of conference and negotiations have been made in it.

The Man of The Hour....

You know him,—at least you have heard about him and you will hear more of him.

He's the sort of fellow who as a young man laid out his scheme of life and followed it through.

During the war he put his money into Liberty bonds instead of squandering it with so-called "good fellows."

He saved his money and is a national asset not a public liability. He is a saver of money, of vitality, of self respect.

He has faith in himself and in his country. He banks on the future. So he knows he must bank in the present.

He saves what he can each week. He saves regularly and watches it grow. He cannot help succeeding because he has the habit of saving systematically.

His savings placed in our savings department bring him 3 per cent. interest. His regular checking account has careful attention at our bank. His valuable papers are absolutely safe in our fireproof, burglar-proof vault.

Let us talk over with you our facilities for handling your banking business as well as his.

Thousands of monkeys today are being inoculated with influenza germs, in order that doctors may study the progress of the disease and discover remedies to stay its dreaded course.

Most people will agree that it is justifiable to subject these animals to suffering in order to safeguard human life. But during the war, thousands of animals were condemned to cruel deaths so that scientists could discover the most efficacious means of destroying human life.

Both in Germany and in this country the scientists who brought the horrible art of poison gas to perfection experimented upon dogs, donkeys, cats, and other animals, and judged by its results on these dumb creatures whether it was calculated to destroy human life with sufficient certainty to justify its use.

Quite apart from the countless horses and mules that have been slaughtered in the war, great numbers of guinea pigs, white mice, singing birds, and owls have been offered up as sacrifices to safeguard soldiers.

SURGEON IN ARMY ABANDONS KNIFE

Dr. Temperly Staton, Well Known in This City, Has Given up His Life's Profession.

SPOKE HERE DURING THE WAR

Recently Returned to Home in Canada to Resume Practice But Decides to Live in Indiana.

Dr. Temperly Staton, a Canadian surgeon who saw active service during the war, well known in this city where he has spoken many times, has given up his practice and intends to live in Indiana. He lost four sons in the war and declared that abandonment of his profession is "just a man losing his nerve, I guess." Dr. Staton was advised of the death of his fourth son just before he was scheduled to give an address at the First M. E. church in this city.

The following article printed in the Indianapolis Star a few days ago will hold interest to local people:

Dr. Temperly Staton knows what it means to give up all that he had, save his life, to the relentless gods of war.

Four sons, handsome manly boys, and three brothers—practically the last of Dr. Staton's kin—lie buried in Flanders field. While staying at the Hotel Severin last week Dr. Staton told some of his close acquaintances something of what war with Germany has meant to him. Some details of the doctor's tragic story fell from his lips during the last months of the war, when he went over Indiana for the State Council of Defense, arousing people to Liberty Loans, Red Cross and United War campaigns. Wherever Dr. Staton spoke his story thrilled his hearers.

Two weeks ago Dr. Staton returned from a business visit to Vancouver and since his return he has been unusually depressed. It was on this visit to the Northwest that he discovered what shell shock means to the nerves of a man who has had it.

Early in the first part of the war, when all Canada was aflame with hatred for the Hun, Dr. Staton was a practicing surgeon in Barrie, a little suburb of Toronto. His wife having died a few years before, Dr. Staton and his four sons kept up the home and lived together.

Tom, a big fellow of 26, was the eldest son, and then came Reggie who was 24, then Fred, about 22, and Stanley, the youngest, just past 19. Canada was pouring its best blood into the war, transports were leaving for England each day and at length one noonday the two elder boys came in with the great news—they had enlisted. Evening brought the two others bursting with the same intelligence—they too, were going.

"My friends and neighbors were giving their sons," said Dr. Staton, "and why should not I? So I put selfishness aside, wore the most cheerful face I could and let my boys go."

Dr. Staton tells how he tried to go it alone for a while, but when he found his three brothers were to be under arms he felt he could stand it no longer and must get into the fight. "Besides," he said, "I felt I might be near my boys—that was the great incentive."

Dr. Staton experienced no difficulty in getting into the Royal Army Medical Corps when he offered himself, and with the rank of captain was soon overseas, pushing toward the front. Some time after landing in England he saw his four sons.

After that when they were swallowed up by the advancing divisions, he never saw the three elder boys again. Months after that he was billeted with Stanley, the youngest, and with his own eyes saw the tragic end of the boy.

It was on Oct. 22, 1917, shortly after a battle of the Somme, that Dr. Staton witnessed the tragic death of his youngest boy, was desperately wounded himself and suffered shell shock of the most violent character. The father had learned some time before that his boy Reggie had fallen at Ypres, with two of Dr. Staton's brothers. Young Stanley, Dr. Staton says, was killed a few days after he and a detachment of sixty-eight men had fallen back of the lines for a few days' rest. Dr. Staton chanced to be at this point performing surgical operations as the wounded were spending glorious days together.

"The enemy was constantly throwing shells at long range," said the doctor, "but on this day was strangely quiet. The boys were ready to have mess and longed for some milk. I knew where milk was hidden in a dugout and went to get it. I got back to within 150 yards of the boys when a great shell burst among them."

A scar in Dr. Staton's cheek shows where a piece of shrapnel struck him. Another piece tore an ugly hole in his abdomen. Fourteen out of the sixty-eight men were killed. Dr. Staton found his son frightfully mutilated, his head blown from his body. The surgeon himself was in the hospital for weeks.

One day, three months after Stanley Staton yielded up his life, a broken man came out of Belgium, made his way to England and across the Atlantic to Canada. It was not the same Dr. Staton that had gone into Belgium two years before. It was the pitiable wreck of a man, the very heart gone out of him, buried there in Flanders' poppy field where lay his boys.

"I felt I could never live in my old home again," said Dr. Staton, "for I wanted to get away from things that would constantly remind me of our little family before it was broken. Somebody told me about Indianapolis, a beautiful city, peopled with generous warm hearted folks, so I came down here and I have found it just as it was pictured. One can't forget here, but one can learn to live again."

Dr. Staton's physical appearance betrays little of the mental agony he has endured. The shock from the shell that killed his boy bothers him continually and an odd thing has happened to him recently, the result of the shock. "It's just a man losing his nerve I guess," he exclaimed.

A fortnight ago, Dr. Staton went to the Northwest, with a view to re-establishing himself in surgery with another physician of prominence. He had not attempted an operation since he was injured. On this recent visit his doctor friend suggested that he try his hand at surgery. Dr. Staton, with some misgivings, consented to work on a patient suffering with gall stones. The first incision of the knife brought blood and the man, who had gone through the bloodiest war the world ever knew, collapsed. It was then he realized, he says, that the skilled hand and steady nerve of the noted Canadian surgeon was gone—perhaps forever.

"I can't explain it," he said, "but I know that $100,000 would not tempt me to try another surgical operation."

Dr. Staton has means and is looking about for a business location in a quiet Indiana town. He says he will remain in Indiana.

For several years Dr. Staton practiced surgery in London, England, a member of the staff at Guy's Hospital. He was also associated with Sir Richard Quain, for twenty-seven years physician to Queen Victoria.

CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE FAVOR CORPORATE CONTROL

Indiana Organizations Vote on Plan of American Railway Operation.

Indianapolis, September 20—Returns on the referendum vote cast in Indiana on the railroad plan submitted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States show that the commercial organizations of Anderson, Crawfordsville, Crown Point, Gary, Greenfield, Huntington, Indianapolis, Laporte, New Albany, Richmond, Shelbyville, South Bend and Wabash voted in favor of "corporate ownership and operation with comprehensive regulation," and "return of the roads to corporate operation as soon as remedial legislation can be enacted."

Alexandria, Auburn, Bedford, Columbus, Connersville, Delphi, Elwood, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Fowler, Frankfort, Goshen, Hammond, Kokomo, Lebanon, Logansport, Marion, Michigan City, Nappanee, Newcastle, Peru, Terre Haute, Tipton, Valparaiso and Winchester, which belong to the national chamber, did not avail themselves of the opportunity to vote.

The fourteen organizations participating in the referendum also went on record as favoring: (a) Consolidation, in the public interest, with prior approval by government authority, in a limited number of strong competing systems; (b) requirement that railroad companies engaged in interstate business become Federal corporations, with rights of taxation and police regulation retained by the states; (c) exclusive regulation of capital expenditures and security issues; (d) Federal regulation of interstate rates affecting interstate rates; (e) statutory rule providing that rates in each traffic section shall yield an adequate return on a fair value of property as determined by public authority.

All organizations voting, excepting Greenfield, favored the creation of a Federal transportation board to promote development of a national system of rail, water and highway transportation and articulation of all transportation facilities.

The complete returns on the referendum show that from 80 to 99 per cent of votes cast in forty-eight states were for the general railroad plan outlined, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, therefore, is committed to it. The chairman of the railroad committee, George A. Post of New York, has presented the plan to the appropriate committees of Congress.

Thirty different plans for disposing of the railroads have been offered, but only two have had referendum treatment—the Chamber of Commerce plan which has the indorsement of business men, and the Plumb plan for government ownership which has the indorsement of the railroad brotherhoods.

RETAIL FOOD PRICES IN AUGUST TOUCH HIGH MARK

Advance of One Per Cent. in August Above July Reports. Shown in Labor Department's Bulletin.

By United Press
Washington, September 20.—Retail food prices in August were one per cent. higher than in July setting a new high price record, the bureau of labor statistics reported today. Today's estimate was apparently in conflict with the department of justice statement that figures from twelve states indicate a decline of from ten to fifteen per cent. in food prices. Discussing its report, the labor bureau said:

"This makes the total cost of twenty-two articles of food upon which this comparison is made, the highest on record."

Evansville, Sept. 20—French is the most popular language in the Central High school here, according to Prof. John Chewing, principal. There also is a noticeable increase in the French classes at the Franke Josef Reitz school. One class in Spanish has been organized and four others are taught Latin. These increases were brought about by the state law banning German language from the curriculum of educational institutions.

Your Reasonable Service

By REV. W. W. KETCHUM
Director of the Evening Classes,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God.—Rom. 12:1-2.

Before we consider this text it should be noted that these words are urged upon the saved and not the unsaved. God does not ask the unsaved, as such, to do what is here urged; rather asks them to accept Christ as their Savior, and when they have done that he enjoins upon them the exhortations of this text.

The first thing enjoined in the text is to present our bodies a living sacrifice. There is nothing in this injunction that even hints at asceticism. It is simply an exhortation to devote to God our bodies which rightly belong to him. This is a reasonable service, and we shall understand it to be such if we keep in mind that even our bodies do not belong to us but to God, and that they are the temples of the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 6:19-20).

We now naturally ask, how shall we present our bodies as a living sacrifice? If we turn to the sixth chapter of Romans we shall find the answer to this question. In that chapter we read, "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lust thereof; neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God."

The second thing urged upon us by our text is nonconformity to this age: "Be not conformed to this world," or as better rendered, "to this age." This, if it means anything, means that we are not to be like the time in which we live, which is called evil by the word of God. Paul's expression concerning it is, "This evil age." In thus characterizing the age in which we live, Paul does not necessarily mean that everything in it is bad, but rather that evil is its distinguishing or characteristic mark. It was with knowledge of this fact that Jesus, in his intercessory prayer, prayed for his disciples of all time, saying, "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil."

It should be evident to all that this injunction means that we as Christians are not to fashion our lives after this age so that they correspond with it, but we are to take a position toward this age that will put us out of correspondence with its evil. This unquestionably means that we shall be obliged oftentimes to decline to allow our lives to be governed by the habits and customs of our times. We cannot, if we obey God, be in agreement with those things that are contrary to the standard which God has set for us. This may mean that we shall be considered by the world a queer people, but if this cause us humiliation we should be perfectly willing to suffer shame for Christ's sake. In fact, the word of God tells us that Jesus Christ "gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

The third injunction of our text is, "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." More, you see, is expected of us as Christians than nonconformity to this age. We are to be not only unlike it, but entirely different from it. The word "transformed" is the same word translated "transfigured" in the accounts concerning Christ when he took Peter, James and John with him into the mountain, apart from the rest of the disciples, and was, if we now use the word of our text, "transformed" before them. The accounts tell us that "His face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light." Of course it is not expected of us that we shall have such a supernatural appearance as did Christ, but that our life shall partake of the characteristics of that country toward which we are traveling, so that those who see us shall know by our conduct that our citizenship is in heaven.

The text tells us the divine way by which we may be transformed. It is "by the renewing of the mind." If we turn to Titus 3:5 we shall see that this is the work in us of the Holy Spirit. There we read of the "renewing of the Holy Ghost." Brethren, if we are to be unlike this age, and like the age to come, it will be only as we allow God, through the Holy Spirit, to "renew our minds."

Ingredients of Virtue.

Wherefore did God create passions within us, pleasures round about us, but that these rightly tempered are the very ingredients of virtue?—John Milton.

YOUR RED CROSS IS STILL VERY BUSY

Read What Your Dollar Is Doing

JUNIORS of today make the Red Cross of tomorrow!

In the membership drive during September the Lake Division of the Red Cross wants to enroll 200,000 school children and more, to help the Greatest Mother in the World. Red Cross Juniors have an extensive after-war work to carry out.

Junior Membership is only 25 cents. It is taken out in school-room units so that every school child can be a member of the Junior Red Cross. A world of opportunity for helping other children all over the world is open to Red Cross Juniors.

Even as far away as Hawaii children busy in school all day sell coffee by lantern light at night to earn money for their Junior Red Cross. The National Children's Fund to which is contributed Junior Membership fees has a two-fold purpose.

With it, relief is furnished to suffering children throughout the world and at home community activities expressing the spirit of the American Red Cross are fostered. In a word the Junior Red Cross aims to establish international understanding and good will among all children; to provide motives for purposeful and useful school activities and to inculcate ideals and habits of service.

HOW TO JOIN THE RED CROSS JUNIORS

UPON application for membership schools are placed on the department of Junior Membership mailing list at Lake Division headquarters to receive the National bulletin issued monthly by the Department of Junior Membership at Washington.

Upon payment of membership fees schools receive certificates or renewal cards which are their receipts for membership fees for the current year.

Service to others is the appeal of the Junior Red Cross today. The public school working with the Red Cross is the natural agency for spreading a new consciousness of the humanitarian obligation of men and nations toward each other.

WILL SPREAD EDUCATION

TWO phases of education present themselves in the Junior Red Cross after-war program. One is the providing of scholarship for children of disabled soldiers, sailors and marines who wish to attend schools of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

The purpose of the scholarship is to furnish a sum of money to keep children from fourteen to sixteen years old out of industry for a few years longer than family finances permit and to make it possible for them to have added vocational training to fit them for self-support.

In this the Red Cross will be co-operating with the Vocational Board which has an extensive program well under way for providing training for disabled service men.

The other educational aim of the Junior Red Cross is to develop among children of all nations understanding of social, industrial and commercial conditions as they exist and will develop in the future.

To meet these needs the Red Cross has compiled a series of graded lessons which teachers may present to their pupils in the schools. These deal with geography, customs, occupations and other affairs peculiar to each country, and are prepared to give a basic understanding of the world as it is in process of change today.

School teachers who have completed the standard Red Cross First Aid course and hold a certificate from National Headquarters will be qualified to give this instruction in their schools this fall.

NOTED CITIZENS ENDORSE JUNIOR PEACE PROGRAM

GOVERNOR JAMES M. COX of Ohio says concerning the new program: "The purpose and plan of the Junior Red Cross appeals to me greatly. Development of international understanding and good will can be given no place in a comparable measure with the undertaking among children."

"I have examined your plans with interest," writes Governor J. P. Goodrich of Indiana, "and it gives me pleasure, indeed, to endorse the proposed work of our school children to assist in relieving suffering in Europe."

V. O. Gilbert, State Superintendent of Schools for Kentucky, endorses the plan as being worth while from the material side but of greatest value from its educational side in the development of character.

HOME TOWN HELPSPLANT MORE CHERRY TREES

Good Reasons for Urging Increased Cultivation of Useful and Pretty Bearers of Fruit.

Although in at least two states, Pennsylvania and Ohio, there are more than 1,000,000 cherry trees and nearly as many in several other states, the commercial interests are relatively small compared with several other fruits in which the number of trees is considerably less.

In the south the summers are too long and hot, as a rule, for cherries to do well, and they do their best at the higher altitudes.

In their endurance of low temperatures sour cherries compare favorably with apples. Sweet cherries are less hardy than sour sorts. Their endurance of cold corresponds more nearly to that of the peach.

Cherries are sensitive to a poorly drained soil. Clay soils, extremely retentive of moisture, give the poorest results, and the lighter, better drained soils the best. Soils that dry out excessively are also unsatisfactory. Moderately productive soils give better results than those which represent either extreme in fertility. Cherries blossom comparatively early, the sweet sorts earlier in most cases than the sour varieties; therefore sites that are subject to spring frosts during the usual blossoming period should be avoided.

MAKES GOOD GRAVEL WALK

Directions for Building Pathway That Will Last for Years and Always Be Dry.

To make a good gravel walk first dig a deep trench the full width of the walk. Fill up the first, or bottom, 12 inches of the trench, with stones, including those found in digging it. On this have a layer of ashes 8 to 12 inches deep when well rolled. Finish off with about 6 inches of gravel, shaped so as to give a rounded surface, highest in the center.

This will soon pack down into a hard surface that will always be dry.

Many Factors in Tree Planting.

In places the trees along the roadside form screens so as to break up the long stretches of views and allow openings here and there which frame and make more attractive the roadside scenery. Again, certain varieties of trees are more suitable for highway planting than others, according to the use to which they will be put. The factor of planting for the protection afforded the pavement through shade during the hot summer months, thereby adding many years to its life, and the assistance given by the proper planting of shrubs and trees in keeping the drifting snow from the roadside during the winter season should be likewise considered.

Business and Residential Streets.

Keeping business off residential streets means keeping it on business streets. Haphazard development hurts business property as much as it does residence property. The sporadic store invading quiet home streets not only demoralizes residential values; in decentralizing the shopping district it also disintegrates business values.

Viewed in every way the experience of New York has clearly demonstrated that no large city can afford to do without zoning.—American Architect.

Character and Careers.

Some one has said that character is greater than any career, and nothing that you will ever accomplish compares in importance to the making of yourself. To be noble, pure and strong, with courage for every misfortune, a helping hand for whoever needs it, and kindness for all, is worth more than to write one's name high in the list of those the world counts great.—Girl's Companion.

The Way to Save Time.

The only way to save time is to use it. We can put our money into the savings bank to be kept for us till we are ready to use, but there is no such thing as putting by our leisure moments till we need them. If you would save time, use it, for you cannot hoard it.—Girl's Companion.

BUILD A DAM IF YOU WANT POWER

WATER-POWER experts say that there is enough running water going to waste in the northern Great Lakes states to run all the cotton looms in the world.

If it could be harnessed to turbines or wheels.

But running water is useless for power purposes unless somebody has enterprise enough to build a dam and impound the water until there is sufficient "fall" to give the required velocity in the turbine casing.

The same is true of the money in circulation. We have in the United States not far from $60 per capita of "circulation"—that is to say all kinds of money that passes from hand to hand.

To get the real force and effect of that $60 per capita average—to obtain the benefit of your personal share of the total "money in circulation"—you must build a dam.

Saving—systematic and regular SAVING—is the dam whereby money gains power to turn the wheels of industry.

The best dam you can build to import "head" and force to your surplus earnings is one built of U. S. Government Thrift Stamps, War Savings Stamps and Treasury Savings certificates.

Begin today. Every day you delay costs you a lot of power and 4 per cent compound interest to boot.

WHYHun Advance Was Halted by U. S. Marines

The Germans made a great mistake in prejudging the possible effectiveness of American rifle fire. Robert G. Skerrett, in Leslie's, writes. They had learned from experience that French and English troops generally used their small arms only when within a range of 200 yards. It took our marines to teach them what the rifle could do at 1,000 yards and less. Two regiments of them at Chateau-Thierry smashed the best of the Kaiser's soldiery and halted for all time the confident thrust of a greatly superior force. The Teutons advanced in smooth columns and pushed determinedly forward across a waving wheat field, bent upon overcoming Hill 165, which was held by our sea soldiers.

The marines, trained to keen observation upon the rifle range—nearly all of them wearing a marksman's badge or, better, the emblem of the sharpshooter—did not wait for the gray-coated masses to come closer. With deliberateness those sea soldiers set their sights and aimed their pieces with the same intent to score that they had shown in the calm periods of their practice upon the rifle ranges at Paris Island, Mare Island, Quantico and elsewhere. Without cease, their rifles snapped, and following their fire came the support of artillery. Machine guns ground out their grim torrent of bullets, adding to the toll exacted by the riflemen. Caught in a bewildering storm of scattering shrapnel, machine-gun fire and the amazingly accurate leaden hail from our rifles, the Germans realized that a further advance meant suicide. Their lines hesitated, stopped, and then broke desperately for cover, while the marines savagely raked the woods and ravines to which the Teutons had fled. This effectually ended any hope on the part of the foe that they might make further progress by infiltration.

SING A SONG OF SAVINGS STAMPS

Sing a song of Savings stamps,
The cost of living's high,
But have you counted all the things
These Savings stamps will buy?

They help to take that summer trip,
Or buy some fussy clothes,
How many things they'll help to get,
Goodness only knows!

Wallen turned his back and stared out of one of the forward portholes down onto the dirty foredeck. Was the man lying? Was he telling the truth? That his father had chartered the Monleigh and sailed with her—yes.

But that his death was accidental—the background of his father's life—the recent attempt upon his own life! His brain was working in flashes. This man Laynton repelled him.

An accident—never! There was no room for doubt—"never go to the East"—it was not an accident—his father had been murdered on this ship. And then suddenly he swallowed hard.

It was to save him that his father had chartered the Monleigh and come East; for, according to that list of ports, his father somehow had been in touch with his movements, somehow had known the danger he was in, and, trying to avert it, had been murdered himself.

A cold, merciless passion swept upon him. Someone on this ship was the murderer. Was it this man here? What was at the bottom of it all? It was a long arm of vengeance that reached to that gray stone house in California, that reached to Singapore, to this ship, to that sweltering, plague-stricken bark where, strangely enough, he alone had lived!

And now the score was a very heavy one to pay—his father's life! Well—his eyes narrowed—he would pay it! "Did my father bring a native servant with him—a man named Gunga?" he asked dispassionately.

"No," the other replied. "He was alone."

Wallen nodded. "What else is there to tell me?"

"Not much—but what you can guess," Laynton said. "I ran down through the Makassar strait and made for the nearest port on that list—Pohi here. Your father had paid me for the three months, and if I say it myself, when I make a bargain I stick to it. If I could find you inside the three months I was going to do it.

"I don't know what your father was so anxious about, though I understood, of course, that he chartered me because out here, with you touching at those trading stations, he couldn't reach you by mail or cable; but I made sure it was something mighty important and I thought you'd know what it was."

It was almost an interrogation, put naturally, nonchalantly enough—save for a trace of eagerness in the man's tones that was not entirely disguised. "I haven't the slightest idea," said Wallen smoothly.

"You haven't?" Laynton's eyes for once fixed steadfastly. "Well, that's queer! A man don't go to the expense of chartering a ship like this without a pretty good reason, and—"

"I dare say my father knew," suggested Wallen quietly. Then briskly: "The question now is: What are you going to do, captain?"

"Why?" said Captain Laynton. "I thought I'd made that plain enough. When I make a contract I keep it. It's up to you, Mr. Wallen. There's still say, a matter of two months before

"These Are Your Father's Papers," that charter expires, and the Monleigh's yours until it does—in your father's place. That's square, isn't it?" Wallen hesitated thoughtfully.

On the face of it it was both square and honorable. He began to wonder if he had misjudged the man.

And yet, instinctively, in spite of that, there seemed something specious even in the honesty that appeared to underlie the other's motives. He had reason enough to distrust every soul on board a ship where he was morally certain his father had been murdered! Two months—if he accepted the captain's offer. If he had only something to work on!

Something! Yes, he had something. Drink-House Sam of Singapore!

Captain Laynton spoke again: "Look here!" he said in almost hurt tones. "I can't make you any fairer proposition than that. Can I?"

"No," said Wallen instantly, his mind made up. "And I'll accept your offer, captain, and thank you heartily for it."

"Good!" returned Laynton promptly. "Well, with that settled, what's the sailing orders? We've got steam up and can get away any minute you say the word."

Wallen walked to the cabin door and opened it.

"Then by all means get away at once!" he laughed easily. "And"—he hesitated—"let's see! I guess you'd better shape up for Singapore. Yes, call it Singapore for a starter."

"Right!" answered Laynton. "Singapore it is! But here—Wait a minute, Mr. Wallen."

He hurried to a small iron safe that was built in under his bunk, opened it, and returned with a bulky manila envelope, which he handed to Wallen. "These are your father's papers," he explained. "I collected them together and put them away for safe-keeping."

"Thank you," said Wallen gravely. He stepped out onto the deck. "Oh, by the way, captain," he observed casually, "I notice you carry wireless."

The captain's whistle, pulled from his pocket, chirped shrilly. "You there, forward!" he bawled in a sea voice that was like the bellow of a bull. "Stand by to weigh anchor, Mr. Mott! Hey, Mr. Mott!"

And as the second officer emerged from the chartroom, just abaft the bridge and directly over the captain's cabin: "We'll get under way at once. Let me know when she's up and down."

He turned to Wallen. "Wireless, you said? Oh, yes; it's that blasted new American law—can't trade in American ports without it now, you know."

CHAPTER IV.

The Hand Sinister.

The moonlight bathed her in a soft luminescence as she leaned over the ship's rail; and it seemed to Wallen that he had never seen so beautiful a face. No, "beautiful" wasn't the word at all. It was more than that—a something that counted for more than mere prettiness of features.

"I know you're just dying to find out how I came aboard here," she laughed. "I could see it in your face every time you looked at me at supper."

"Yes," Wallen admitted. "That's true, Miss MacKay. In fact, I've been waiting here on deck for ages to ask you."

She did not answer at once—she was leaning farther over the rail, her eyes fixed on the bubbling phosphorescence as it glided past the ship's hull.

"You are a western man, as we speak of the West here, Mr. Wallen," she said at last seriously; "and perhaps you do not know the East very well—that is, the outpost East, as I call it. Conventions here are—quite different. You, I am sure, are mentally disapproving of my presence on board; you are thinking that I should be accompanied by my mother or my father or a brother, or at least by a female companion of some sort, instead of which I have only—this."

She drew her hand from her pocket, and in the open palm, as she rested it on the rail, lay a small but very serviceable automatic pistol.

It was unexpected, abrupt, and it startled him. He stared blankly at the exquisite silver chasing of the thing as it glinted in the moonbeams.

"But—but to be where that is—is necessary?" he ventured, a little awkwardly.

She shook her head as she returned the weapon to her pocket.

"I do not mean it in that sense—that it is necessary," she answered.

"Those of us who live in the islands of the Peninsula are brought up with firearms from the time almost that we can walk, and conventions with us follow the code framed by the conditions which surround us."

"It's—it's quite different from"—she laughed outright, merrily now—"Vassar, for example. I was there two years. And so you see, Mr. Wallen, if one wants to go anywhere down here it is simply a question of availing oneself of the first opportunity, whatever it may be."

"It's a very homy and commonplace explanation," she said. "I am going to pay a long-promised visit to my uncle and aunt in Sumatra. We live—that is, father and I—on Menado, just north of the Makassar strait. All we see of the outside world is an occasional trading schooner; and so when Captain Laynton put in to ride out a few days' bad weather, with him came the opportunity I was speaking of."

"He said he was to touch at a number of ports beginning with Pohi and work down to Singapore. Well, at Singapore I can get passage across to Sumatra, and that's the whole story. You see"—she was demurely serious now—"I have been very precise because I understand that you are really in command now, and if you disapproved too terribly you might order me ashore at the first port."

"Put you ashore!" exclaimed Wallen with a laugh. "Not much! Besides, we're not touching at any port before Singapore. And"—with sudden inspiration—"I'll tell you what, Miss MacKay, we'll run you over to Sumatra from there, if you like."

"Oh, will you?" she cried excitedly. "That will be splendid! But"—hesitantly—"that's asking altogether too much."

"It isn't asking anything at all!" he assured her warmly. "The debt will be on my side."

"It's perfectly splendid of you!" she said again enthusiastically. "I don't know how to thank you." Her hand, cool and soft, touched his lightly upon the rail.

He clasped it frankly. "Then that settles the bargain, Miss MacKay!" he declared.

She withdrew her hand, nodding her head prettily; and then the dark eyes that were smiling into his grew suddenly troubled.

"I have never heard so strange a thing before as this," she said; "of you, and—and your connection with this ship. And—I've been trying to say it, and didn't quite know how—about your father's loss—I'm so sorry, Mr. Wallen."

"Thank you," he said quietly—and turned away for a moment.

His father's death! He had not even yet come to realize it, except in that cold, merciless desire for vengeance upon the man or men who had been guilty of his father's murder. And now her words brought that thought again surging uppermost in his mind. He faced her once more gravely.

"Could you tell me anything about him—about how it happened, Miss MacKay?" he asked.

"Only what Captain Laynton has probably told you already," she answered slowly. "It was before the ship reached Menado, you know—before I came aboard."

"Yes, of course," said Wallen. He had shifted his position, leaning now with his back against the rail, and, glancing forward along the deck, his eyes fixed suddenly on the wireless house which was quite dark and with no light showing from within. He jerked his hand toward it.

"We've got wireless," he observed.

"But I haven't seen any operator—at least he wasn't at supper."

"Oh, yes, he was!" she laughed. "I'm the operator."

"You—what!" He was gazing at her in amazement.

"Well, no, not really," she amended. "I'm only joking, or, at least, half joking. It's true, though, that any operating that's done I do."

"You see, the American law requires ships coming under its jurisdiction to carry an installation; but Captain Laynton, having no idea of trading with an American port for some months, anyway, said he didn't see why he should pay wages he didn't have to, and discharged his operator when he left Honolulu."

"Yes," said Wallen quickly. "But you?"

"Conditions of the East again," she told him smilingly. "Father installed a small station on our plantation a few years ago, and that nearest neighbor of ours did likewise. It's been heaps of fun, and, of course, I learned to operate it. I got Captain Laynton's permission, teased Mr. Spree, the chief engineer, into letting me have the power, and I've been amusing myself with it since I've been aboard. But now, sir—with sudden severity—"we are forgetting that you are still an invalid, and I am keeping you up. Please take me below, Mr. Wallen."

"Below! But, no!" he protested. "It's early yet."

"But, yes!" she insisted, gayly imperious, and led the way across the deck. "You shouldn't even have been allowed up for supper, you know!"

Wallen, because he could do nothing else, followed her down the companionway and into the saloon.

And there, despite his good-natured grumbling, she stood and watched him in a quaint motherly way until, perforce, he was obliged to go to his cabin door—and then, with a cheery "Good night," she was gone.

"By Jove!" said Wallen softly to himself.

He locked the door, closed the porthole securely, switched on the light, and, seating himself on the edge of the bunk, stared at the floor.

"By Jove!" he repeated softly. Then lugubriously: "And it's only three days to Singapore, and—she didn't say where in Sumatra—but that couldn't be more than another three days at the outside."

He sat up suddenly and pulled out of his pocket the envelope that Captain Laynton had given him. He had not examined it yet. He tore the envelope open, shook the contents out onto the bunk, and whistled now, under his breath.

Among other things, but catching his eye instantly, was a little packet of crisp, new, American hundred-dollar gold certificates. He counted them wonderingly—one thousand one hundred dollars. He laid them down and picked up a wallet. It contained some silver and a few dollars in small bills. Wallen passed his hand a little dazedly across his eyes; and then continued his examination. There was a photograph, a little faded, a little old-fashioned, the photograph of a very beautiful woman. He turned it over. On the back was written: "Elizabeth Powers Wallen."

His mother! He had never known his mother. He held the photograph for a long time in his hand, gazing at the face that now somehow seemed to smile back at him—then put it reverently aside.

There remained perhaps a dozen documents; mortgages in his father's favor, stock certificates and securities of various sorts, the total running into many thousands of dollars—sixty thousand, he put it at a guess, figuring the certificates at par value. Lastly, there was a small sealed envelope.

He opened it with a curious sense of excitement. Here, perhaps, was the secret that had bound up his father's life so mysteriously, and—no—he whistled again in that low, surprised way. It was his father's will, a terse, short document, bequeathing everything "to my son, Stacey Wallen, whom I charge with the care of my faithful servant Gunga as long as the latter shall live."

Big Lot of Hay Fever Jokes

But Kerkucky Man Says—"People Who Belong to Hay Fever Colony are Kidding Themselves."

Wouldn't Be Any Rose or Hay Fever if Suple Home Remedy Was Given a Chance.

"Yes, there's a real NINTY-NINE per cent effective remedy for hay or rose fever," frankly states a druggist in a prosperous Kentucky city.

"But I don't expect anyone to believe me, because the treatment is so easy and the cost not worth mentioning."

"The annual crop of hay-fever jokes would be mighty scarce if people would get an ounce of Mentholized Arcline and by just adding water that has been boiled make a pint of liquid that will prove a real help to all who suffer."

"Many of my hay-fever friends tell me that by starting to gargle and sniff or spray the nostrils a few times a day the expected severe attack often fails to appear and in cases where it does show up is very mild and does not annoy."

"The Better Class of Pharmacists" who dispense Mentholized Arcline say it will greatly modify any attack even when taken three or four days after hostilities begin.

Go to a real live druggist when you get ready to make a pint.

7 A DAY FOR 7 DAYS

If Your Nerves Are Shaky Because of Over-Indulgence in Tobacco or Alcohol or by Excess of Any Kind, Bio-Feren Is What You Need Right Away.

Don't grow old before your time, don't let nervousness wreck your happiness or chances in life. The man with strong, steady nerves is full of vigor, energy, ambition and confidence.

You can have nerves of steel, firm step, new courage and keep mind by putting your blood and nerves in first-class shape with mighty Bio-Feren, a new discovery, inexpensive and efficient.

Men and women who get up so tired in the morning that they have to drag themselves to their daily labor will in just a few days arise with clear mind, definite purpose and loads of ambition.

All you have to do is to take two Bio-Feren tablets after each meal and one at bedtime—7 a day for 7 days—then reduce to one after each meal until all are gone.

Then if your energy and endurance haven't doubled, if your mind isn't keener and eyes brighter, if you don't feel twice as ambitious as before, any druggist anywhere will return the purchase price—gladly and freely.

Bio-Feren is without doubt the grandest remedy for nervous, run-down, weak, anaemic men and women ever offered and is not at all expensive. All druggists in this city and vicinity have a supply on hand—sell many packages.

DIAMONDS

JUST PLAIN FACTS

When better Diamonds are sold, price considered, the house of Geo. F. Kamman will sell them.

When lower priced Diamonds are sold we will sell them.

One look at our display may be sufficient to convince you of the advisability of buying from us. We now all realize that Diamonds have not reached the top in price. There is an even greater scarcity of good Diamonds than there was last year. We have on hand a big stock of good Diamonds, bought early, at much less than the market price today. Take our advice: buy now.

A great many people took our advice two years ago and bought Diamonds from us. Ask them today if they want to sell at what they paid for them, plus six per cent. on their investment. If they want to sell direct them to us.

We give you quality that equals the prices, otherwise we could not offer to buy back the Diamonds we sold.

Asiatic Cholera Raging in Russia.

By United Press
Novorissk, Russia. (By courier to Constantinople.)—An epidemic of Asiatic cholera is raging in this city.

During the past week the death rate from the disease has averaged 120 per day, sixty-five percent of the cases prove fatal. Shore leave from ships in harbor has been discontinued.

Instructions against the use of unboiled water and uncooked food have been issued, but careless living habits of the people render them averse to precautionary measures.

Physicians of the American Red Cross are treating the crews of foreign ships with anti-cholera serum and have furnished serum for use by the health authorities of the city.
